For the Union.

"Even a fool when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise; and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding."

Pardon me, Mr. Editor, if I adopt a "motto" for the benefit of your correspondent "AGRICULTURE ET HUMANITAS."

Had this scribbler as much brains as he professed to have Historical and Classical Knowledge, it would spare me the necessity of borrowing the quotation and the individual from the ridiculous position that his article has placed him in the eyes of the public.

If the individual was seeking for notoriety, he has certainly succeeded to some extent. Had he put his proper name to the article, his fame would certainly be world wide. Great minds always herald their forthcoming literary productions; so also this modern JEMUS. The community had a right to expect something demolishing from the amount of noise made about the "forthcoming reply," amongst a certain class (of doubtful loyalty,) and where there was a great deal of smoke we expected to find some fire also. But, alas! how vain are all human expectations. Your paper of the 31st ult. has made its appearance, and we STILL LIVE! It does look like the production of several small minds, with the assistance of a school Miss with her "LATIN GRAMMAR," by way of embellishment.

The writer states that he "may not be guilty of asserting anything that he cannot prove. He goes on to state, "I feel myself to be as loyal, and to have been so from the very first, as the gentleman ever dared be."

Doubtless true. We have had quite a number of those kind of loyalists amongst us, who were all right at the "very first," that when there was any military duty to do, they were found wanting; such as never show their Union principles by shouldering their gun. One of those loyalists that "shirk" out of all military duty either by non-age, over-age, or some disability, or at best only apologists for rebels. So I judge it to be with this gentleman with the long name.

Now, where is the gentleman's "proof?"

He charges me with advocating "no sympathy, no good-will, for the vanquished."

I have advocated nothing of the kind. I claim that the brave confederate soldier that has fought out his principles, like a man, is the man that deserves sympathy—not the noisy rebel that stayed at home to keep up strife, and now when the war is ended claim that they have been "loyal from the very first;" and to "cap the climax," they take the oath of loyalty, and swear they never were anything else than Union men.

My article was not intended for any local position; it was intended to cover the whole State, intending only to hit those that are deserving its denunciations. The allusion to the three brave young martyrs was only made to bring the matter to ourselves. To our Glasgow preachers, school teachers and lawyers, I would say I had not thought of I only spoke of that class throughout the State that are now howling over and creating strife, over the new constitution. But if they have, by their acts, and influence, come under the proscription provisions, I have no political sympathy for them. As friends, I may feel sorry for them, and would wish it were otherwise with them.

Mr. Editor, as I have nothing to answer, as the long named gentleman did not attempt to controvert a single position I had taken, only charging me with saying things I had never thought of, so I shall not trouble you any more on the subject, and leave him "alone in his glory." I do not know the writer, but only judge his name was suggested by the corresponding length of his ears. His allusion to Titus, Julius Caesar, and Napoleon, is simply ridiculous, doubtless intended as a literary flourish. And lastly, he winds up with, "Ask the brave men of the 43rd who it was that saved them from the murderous design of Anderson, and who nursed and consoled them while suffering?" He answers the question himself by saying "They were the loyal men at heart whom the gentleman denounces stay-at-home traitors." Now if this is not the most complete piece of brazen impudence yet; it even surpasses the "Union from the very first." I will condescend to answer the question. The brave sick and wounded confederate soldiers, with the assistance of their gentlemanly surgeon Dr.
Shultz, saved the brave men of the 43rd.

The Union men and loyal ladies of Glasgow "nursed and I consoled them while suffering," not the "stay-at-home traitors" as the gentleman would have it. There may have been individual exceptions, but very few indeed. I will now close by suggesting a new name for the correspondent, which will be quite as intelligible to the Flat head Indians, as the cognomen adopted by him to the majority of the readers of the Union, it is this, FOC-ORUM AS-UNUM SUBSCRIBER-ORUM.

UNUM.

August 2nd, 1865.

Big Fire in St. Louis.

At 4 o'clock on Tuesday evening a fire broke out in the Globe and Atlantic hemp warehouses adjoining each other, on the west side of Main street, between O'Fallen and Ashley streets, St. Louis. One of the warehouses was a one-and-a-half story brick building and the other a two story brick. Both buildings were filled to their utmost capacity with hemp, not less than ten thousand bales being stored in the two buildings. Both buildings were destroyed, and the entire stock of hemp, the value of which is estimated at something over $350,000, was almost totally destroyed.

The principal losers by the fire were Messrs. Ben W. Lewis & Bros., of Glasgow, who had stored in the two warehouses over seven hundred bales of hemp. Their loss is estimated at over $20,000, which was partly covered by insurance. Messrs. Carr & Luke lost about seventy-five bales, and Messrs. Southworth & Co., and Messrs.
Branham & Hopkins were losers to a much larger amount.

Extraordinary Murder Trial.

A new era has dawned, and indignation rises at Salisbury, N. C. It seems that some six weeks since Miss Temperance Neely, daughter of an old and prominent citizen, shot and killed Galina, one of the family's female servants. Mrs. Neely was flogging Galina's child; when the dusky mother came to the rescue Miss Temperance shot her dead. There were no witnesses to the act except negroes, and under the old system of affairs the case could not even have been brought to a trial, as both the mother and daughter would have been jointly indicted, and then no evidence could have been obtained to convict of any crime, the testimony of blacks being worthless against whites. But Gen. Schofield ordered the young woman to be tried by a military commission, which has just closed its session with a verdict of guilty.

It appeared in evidence that Galina was raised on the place, and had been a favorite household servant; that she was twenty-four years old, the mother of six children, and never married, even according to slaveholding customs; that she interceded to save her child, pushed Mrs. Neely away, seized it in her arms, and was making off for her cabin when shot. Mrs. Neely, on the stand, disclaimed any idea of personal danger, and only pleaded her daughter's horror at the act, and subsequent efforts to ameliorate the condition of things.

Except in the plea to the jurisdiction of the Court, and the objections made to the introduction of negro testimony, the counsel for the defence did not allude to the changed condition of affairs in the State which the case indicated, only as the act of Galina—one from whom the accused had been taught to expect servile obedience—in laying violent hands upon her mother
